We present hybrid images, a technique that produces static images with two interpretations, which change as a function of viewing distance. Hybrid images are based on the multiscale processing of images by the human visual system and are motivated by masking studies in visual perception. This paper expounds on the nature of human creativity involved in text-to-image art (so-called “AI art”) with a specific focus on the practice of prompt engineering. The paper argues that the current product-centered view of creativity falls short in ... Real images have various properties that other datasets do not. Many of these properties can be made apparent by examining the covariance matrix of the tiny images dataset. Figures 1.1 and 1.2 show this covariance matrix.
